Figures recently published show that at present there are 708 kilometers of paved roads in the State of Sao Paulo. Practically all of these reach out from the city of Sao Paulo, such as 250 kilometers on the Rio de Janeiro road, 65 kilometers on the Santos road, two hundred kilometers on the Campinas-Limeira-Mogi Mirim road, one hundred kilometers on the Sorocaba road. By the end of 1954 it is expected that the total length of paved roads will reach 12 hundred kilometers. Although this accomplishment is praised, it also shows just how far behind the road programs are, considering that Sao Paulo is the richest state in the country, with the largest industrial plant and the richest agricultural crop.
